

Has the body of Jesus Christ been found in a chamber beneath the Great Pyramid of Egypt?

14th April 2025

A British anthropologist has provided the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities with extensive data proving that the sarcophagus of Jesus Christ and the Ark of the Covenant are to be found in the 'Cave of the Patriarchs', a hidden double-cave, beyond a stone block which seals the southern passageway of the subterranean chamber beneath the Great Pyramid in Giza.

Dr Warner first presented his 10-year research project to the Director of the Science Office around Christmas 2021. The director responded with enthusiastic support, calling his research "a scientific revolution [...] for the benefit of all humanity".

Warner's working hypothesis was reinforced by extensive fieldwork in Egypt and site surveys deep inside the pyramid using the latest technology. Surveys which showed manmade structures beyond the last remaining stone block, in the southern passageway; confirmation that his hypothesis was correct. Dr Warner's video and photographic records were the first such images to emerge from the deepest, and most remote part of the original pyramid structure; carved out of the bedrock itself.

Following delivery of his research data to Egyptian officials, the Supreme Council of Antiquities made the rare exception of appointing Dr Warner as a consultant grafted into the Scan Pyramids Mission - a consortium of international scientists and engineers from France, Canada, Japan and Egypt; the team are directing muon radiation particles through stone to look deep inside the pyramids.

"After meeting at the office of Ahmed Issa (Minister for Tourism & Antiquities Egypt) 20th October 2022, Egypt agreed to receive my research data free of charge in return for a commitment that the Scan Pyramids Mission would radiate beyond the block in the subterranean chamber," said Dr Warner.

However, the muon radiation scan has not been completed, which leaves Egypt in breach of its agreement. Consequently, Dr Warner has enlisted the support of Prime Minister Nawaf Salam of Lebanon, who is also President of the United Nations International Court of Justice, in the hope that he can arbitrate to avoid an international row breaking out - as a result of opposition from Zahi Hawass - whose influence and ego are notoriously grandiose, proclaiming himself "the guardian of the pyramids".

Warner states “Although the project has received support from the very highest authorities in Egypt (including the office of the President himself), Hawass remains an obstacle to progress. New scientific ideas often attract violent opposition from the old guard – as evidenced throughout history – we have Copernicus, Galileo and Giordano Bruno to testify to this”. These renaissance men were vilified for thinking that stars were distant suns with their own solar systems. Once thought too heretical to be spoken out loud, ideas such as these are now accepted as inescapable truths.

Dr Warner, who confirms that he is not religious, took a purely secular approach to the project and was able to pinpoint the exact location using the “scientific method” and triangulated data from the texts of all three Abrahamic religions – Judaism, Christianity & Islam. By augmenting this data with written records from the ancient cuneiform clay tablets of Mesopotamia, Warner used the scientific discipline of Etymology to prove his hypothesis: that ‘Mount Sinai’, the ‘Mountain of Israel’, the ‘Mount of Olives’, ‘Mount Zion’ and the Quran's ‘Mountain of Light’, were all one-and-the-same mountain...the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Hence, Jesus gave his ‘Sermon on the Mount’ at the Great Pyramid, the birthplace of all Abrahamic religions and the ‘mountain land’ which the biblical Abraham journeyed to from Ur.

G.A.R.P. has published the entire research dossier, and a comprehensive archive of government correspondences, at www.garp.space, where Dr Warner has also presented his binary star theory as it pertains to ancient Egyptian art and the winged disc iconography of Lower Egypt.

Furthermore, Dr Warner uses quantum theory to demonstrate that “religious prophecy” is rooted in science as evidenced in the government-sponsored projects of today. Experimental scientists, such as Stephen A. Schwartz, have published papers on ‘non-local consciousness’ or ‘channeling’ which Warner says is “prophecy by another name”, or put another way: “the ability to experience future spacetime events while rooted in the present”. Dr Warner explains that “the phenomenon is akin to what physicists today call ‘quantum entanglement’; the same principle which is at the heart of the latest quantum supercomputer designs”.

Dr Warner believes that “the discovery has the potential for peace in the Middle East” and wants the last stone block removed this year to allow for the Ark to be displayed as the ‘Jewel of the Nile’ at the opening of the new Grand Egyptian Museum, right next to the Pyramids site in Giza. Eli Escusido, Director General of the Israeli Antiquities Authority, has wished Dr Warner ‘success in his mission’.
